

Real Estate Advisory: FAQs About the Significant Changes to 2023 Property Tax Assessments and Assessment Appeals in Allegheny County

Allegheny County property owners may have a chance to significantly reduce their property's assessed value in 2023. This is due to a large change to Allegheny County's common level ratio ("CLR"). Below are answers to some frequently asked questions about how Allegheny County's 2023 CLR can impact assessed values and property taxes.

What is the CLR?

Every county has a "base year" for tax assessment purposes. Property assessments are supposed to reflect a base year valuation. The base year for Allegheny County is 2012.

The CLR is a ratio which is intended to convert present day market values into base year assessed values. The CLR is adjusted annually based on sales data selected by each county.

How is Allegheny County's CLR changing in 2023?

In 2023, Allegheny County's CLR will drop from 81.1% to 63.6%, representing the largest one-year drop in decades. With the new CLR, a property with a market value of $1,000,000 could see its assessed value drop from $811,000 in 2022, to $636,000 in 2023.

Why is the CLR changing so significantly?

Allegheny County has changed the property sales data used for the 2023 CLR. This change in data selection has resulted in a significant correction to the CLR for 2023.

When Can I file a 2023 tax appeal?

In Allegheny County: between January 1, 2023 and March 31, 2023. Each county varies.

Will I Receive the 2023 CLR Adjustment without Filing an Appeal?

No, you must file a tax assessment appeal.

How will the 2023 CLR impact my property taxes?

Property taxes are based on assessed value. Assessed values are taxed at the millage rates set by Allegheny County, your school district, and local municipality. Assuming no change in millage rates, a lower assessed value means lower property taxes.

Taxing authorities may increase their millage rates to avoid a large drop in tax revenue resulting from fewer assessed dollars. If millage rates increase, each assessed dollar will be taxed more. In a rising millage rate environment, property owners will see tax increases unless they can reduce their assessed value via a tax assessment appeal.

Should I file a 2023 tax assessment appeal?

The answer to this question will vary based on each property's use, market value, current assessed value, and the strategies available to obtain a reduction for that property.
